ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

Auguste Rodin more than any other individual determined the course of modern sculpture. By an intense study of nature and of human form and gesture, by a careful re-examination of the sculpture of antiquity, the Middle Ages and the Renaissance, by a close familiarity with progressive currents in the arts of his time—particularly impressionism and symbolism—and by the energy of his creative personality, Rodin was able to turn his back on the sterile academism of nineteenth-century statuary and to create a vigorous new idiom for sculptors.

It is an astonishing fact that this is the first comprehensive loan exhibition of Rodin's work ever held in America. We are honored by the sponsorship of the exhibition by the Association Française d'Action Artistique and greatly appreciate the personal assistance of M. Edouard Morot-Sir, Cultural Counselor of the French Embassy.

On behalf of the Trustees of The Museum of Modern Art, I take this opportunity to express my gratitude to all the individuals who have helped in the realization of this important event. First of all, I want to thank the four museums which have been most important in this endeavor. The California Palace of the Legion of Honor, San Francisco, is participating in the presentation of this exhibition in the United States and has lent many essential works. We are especially grateful to its director, Mr. Thomas C. Howe and to Mr. Gaillard Ravenel. We are greatly indebted to the Rodin Museum in Philadelphia and its director, Mr. Henri Marceau; the Musée Rodin in Paris and its curator, Mme Cécile Goldscheider, and Mlle C. Lionne; The Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York and its director, Mr. James J. Rorimer and especially its curator of Western European Arts, Mr. John Goldsmith Phillips. All lovers of Rodin owe a great and permanent debt to the late Jules E. Mastbaum and the members of his family in New York and Philadelphia who have been of great assistance in this undertaking.

I want to express my special thanks to Professor Albert E. Elsen of Indiana University not only for his authorship of the book on Rodin which the Museum is publishing in connection with this exhibition, but for his essential advice and assistance throughout the preparation of the exhibition. I wish to voice my appreciation to Edward Steichen for his joyous encouragement and to René d'Harnoncourt who first conceived the idea of this exhibition and has installed it so brilliantly. Many thanks are due also to Wayne V. Andersen who has helped in obtaining essential information in Paris, to Miss Darthea Speyer of the Centre Culturel Américain in Paris, and to Charles and Regina Slatkin. I also want to thank the following colleagues for their untiring assistance: Miss Helen Franc, Miss Alicia Legg, Miss Therese Varveris.

Our sincere gratitude and appreciation are extended to the collectors, museums and dealers in this country and Europe without whose generous participation this retrospective of Rodin's work would not have been possible.

Peter Selz, Director of the Exhibition

In collaboration with The California Palace of the Legion of Honor, San Francisco, where many of the works in the New York exhibition will be shown. A separate catalogue of the San Francisco exhibition will be published.

The dates given for each work generally refer to the original version in plaster. When two dates are given, the first designates the original plaster, and the second the date of the first casting in bronze (which, however, may not be that of the cast exhibited). References are given to Georges Grappe's catalogue of the Musée Rodin (1944 edition) whenever the works are listed in that catalogue (although not necessarily in the same medium or scale). Certain dates have been revised by Mme Cécile Goldscheider, Curator of the Musée Rodin, Paris and Albert E. Elsen, author of the monograph, Rodin, published by The Museum of Modern Art in conjunction with this exhibition. According to Mme Goldscheider, Rodin's accounts have not been preserved and it is generally not possible to determine the date of the first casting. It is hoped, however, that further study and research now in progress may yield more accurate dates.

Where known, the founders' marks and cast numbers are indicated. In dimensions, height precedes width and depth. Dimensions of drawings give sheet size unless sight measurement is indicated. For the prints the plate size is given.

All works from The Rodin Museum, Philadelphia (created by the gifts of the late Jules E. Mastbaum) are lent by the courtesy of the Commissioners of Fairmount Park and the Philadelphia Museum of Art.
