More than 300 posters from the 1880’s, when a break with traditional styles began the development of the modern poster, to today’s "psychedelic" manifestations are on view at The Museum of Modern Art from January 25 through March 10 in WORD AND IMAGE. This is the first comprehensive historical survey selected from the Museum’s collection of over 2,000 posters and other printed material.

"The Museum’s collection has not attempted to document social history," states Mildred Constantine, Associate Curator of Graphic Design and director of the show. "But because of the nature of the poster, the collection reflects the social, political and environmental events of the day, in addition to paralleling developments in the 20th century visual arts."

WORD AND IMAGE: Posters and Typography from the Graphic Design Collection of
The Museum of Modern Art 1870-1967 is organized according to general stylistic periods: Art Nouveau, including rare examples by Beardsley, Mackintosh, Bonnard, Lautrec, Guimard and Mucha; Russian Constructivism, the German Bauhaus and de Stijl in The Netherlands in the 20’s; the great posters of the French designer Cassandre in the 30’s; war and political posters of the 1940’s; travel, product advertising, films and sports announcements of the 50’s; and the posters of the 1960’s, including a selection of "psychedelic" work by Peter Max, Victor Moscoso and others. Some of these are shown under black light to reveal additional color combinations. A separate section is devoted to posters for art exhibitions by such well-known painters as Picasso, Braque and Miro.

"While in the past it was the painter whose work influenced graphic design," Miss Constantine continues, "today’s posters, billboards and cartoons form such a large part of the visual environment that their elements—both in style and subject—are frequently used by painters." The exploration of form and technique in poster design has been encouraged by the development of mechanical typesetting devices, photography, silk screen, printing in multiple colors, new inks and new materials such as vinyl and metallic papers.

A.M. Cassandre's monumental Nicolas of 1935 dominates the section of the show devoted to the twenties and thirties. More than 13 by 15 feet, the poster anticipates today's "op" art but is also influenced by late Cubism. It has not been exhibited since 1956, and never before with its original printed frame.

The influence of Bauhaus architecture and industrial design, which emphasized structural characteristics, brought major changes to typographic design and its appearance on the printed page. The letter forms, which in the early decades of the 20th century were either hand-drawn or fat and bold characters, were to become, under Bauhaus influence, simple, sophisticated forms made up of arcs, angles, vertical and horizontal lines. Bauhaus letters were designed for clarity, and their forms were considered appropriate for mechanical printing.

The content of posters from 1936 to 1949 was largely shaped by world events, war, politics, propaganda. The social and information message often took precedence over aesthetics. Included here are Ben Shahn's poster for the CIC, For Full Employment after the War Register - Vote, Lester Beall's Slums Breed Crime, Milton Ackoff's Wipe Out Discrimination, and war posters such as Leo Lionni's Keep 'Em Rolling and Jean Carlu's America's Answer! Production. Among the most striking examples from the 1950's is Hans Erni's Atomkrieg Nein (Atomic War No), depicting a mushroom cloud rising from a skull.

The 1960's have seen a poster revolution; posters are displayed everywhere: in public places and in students' rooms, in art galleries and in poster stores. Posters have been commissioned from leading artists by The Paris Review (Frisol, Warhol) and List Art Posters (Frank Stella's Lincoln Center Festival '67) and by some cities (Tomoko Miho's Great Architecture in Chicago) and states (Armin Hofmann's posters for Basel) as cultural expression. The stylistic circle has come around, for "psychedelic" poster designers such as Victor Moscoso, Peter Max and Wes Wilson in the United States and others in Britain draw upon Art Nouveau for their adventurous designs. However, the range of colors, the fluorescent and day-glo inks and mixed printing techniques belong exclusively to today.

WORD AND IMAGE is directed by Mildred Constantine and has been installed by Arthur Drexler, Director, Department of Architecture and Design. Key posters are mounted on boxes projecting from the walls at many levels in the central gallery, and a perimeter gallery around this core section supports and fills out the major trends for the visitor interested in studying particular periods in more depth.

A 36 by 10 foot life-size poster of a Greyhound bus, designed by Mason Williams from a photograph by Max Yavno, is installed in the corridor leading to the show. About twenty artists were invited to inscribe the title of the show and their signatures on the poster.

WORD AND IMAGE is the 35th exhibition of posters at the Museum since 1933, when an exhibition selected from a poster competition was presented. Beginning in 1964, a small selection from the Museum’s collection has been continuously on view in the Philip L. Goodwin Galleries for Architecture and Design. Watch the Fords Go By, a large, striking poster of 1938 by Cassandre, will be on view there during the course of the WORD AND IMAGE exhibition.

From April 6 through June 15, 1968, WORD AND IMAGE will be shown at HemisFair '68 in San Antonio, Texas. The Museum commissioned the Japanese designer Tadanori Yokoo to design a poster for WORD AND IMAGE which is on sale at the Museum for $5.00.

Photographs and additional information available from Elizabeth Shaw, Director, Department of Public Information, and Patricia B. Kaplan, Associate, Press Services, The Museum of Modern Art, 11 West 53 Street, New York, N.Y. 10019. 212-535-3200.
Posters and other printed combinations of word and image have been collected by the Museum’s Department of Architecture and Design since the 1950’s. They are chosen for their intrinsic quality and for their significance in the history of modern graphic design. There have been 35 poster exhibitions at the Museum, but this selection of some 300 examples is the first comprehensive survey of the collection.

International in scope, the exhibition begins with work of the 1880’s, marking a break with traditional graphic styles and the emergence of the modern poster. It continues with Art Nouveau, an interlude during which such painters as Bonnard and Toulouse-Lautrec designed posters themselves and profoundly influenced the graphic arts of their time. Subsequent movements in the arts—Expressionism, Constructivism, Cubism, Surrealism—have all contributed to the forms and even the content of twentieth century posters.

Bauhaus architecture and industrial design, with their emphasis on structure and geometry, brought major changes to typography and its appearance on the printed page. Letter forms became simple geometric configurations, considered appropriate for mechanical printing. Photography, new printing techniques, and new materials have also encouraged experiments with form and technique. In the past it was the painter who most often influenced graphic design but posters, billboards, and cartoons form such a large part of the environment that today elements of their style and subject matter are used by painters.

The poster collection is not meant to document history, but inevitably posters reflect the cultural and political events of their time. Their juxtaposition of word and image triggers an emotional response more immediate and yet more complex than either word or image alone could produce.

Re WORD AND IMAGE EXHIBITION

A poster 36 feet long and 10 feet high, installed at the entrance to the WORD AND IMAGE exhibition on the ground floor of The Museum of Modern Art, will be inscribed with the title of the show by 20 artists on Monday, January 22, beginning at twelve noon. The exhibition, which opens to the public on Thursday, January 25, includes more than 350 examples from the Museum's graphic design collection from 1879 to the present.

Mason Williams, who conceived the monster poster from a photograph by Max Yavno, a full-size reproduction of a Greyhound Bus, will be on hand to watch and participate in the graffiti ceremonies. Mr. Williams, a young West Coast designer, poet and folk singer, is a writer for the Smothers Brothers television show.

Among the artists who will decorate Mr. Williams' bus poster on Monday, are Ivan Chermayeff, Peter Gee, Herbert Matter, Alexander Katz, Peter Max and Milton Glaser. Each will be given a choice of paint, pens, crayons or pencils with which to write the name of the show WORD AND IMAGE in any way they wish and their signature. All are represented in the Museum's collection of posters and graphic design.

Williams made the bus poster last year. He began the project with Max Yavno's 4x5" negative that was blown up to a 16 x 20" print. Another negative was made, projected and printed in 16 sheets that he taped together with 120 feet of Scotch Brand double-faced tape.

Two hundred copies of the bus poster have been printed. Each is folded into a 11 pound cardboard box, 15" x 17" x 5". On the outside in large letters is the title "Bus" by Mason Williams. In smaller letters are the words "Warning Do Not Open in the Wind."
NOTE: Photographers should use the main entrance at 11 West 53 Street.

Please stop by the Information Desk for a pass to the gallery where the artists are working which is closed to the public.
