FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

The Museum of Modern Art, New York, announces the appointment of John McAndrew as curator of its Department of Architecture and Industrial Art. The appointment will be effective September 1, 1937.

In order to accept the position at the Museum Mr. McAndrew recently resigned an assistant professorship at Vassar College where he taught History of Architecture (1932-1937). At Vassar he was also architectural consultant on new buildings and remodeling problems.

Mr. McAndrew was born in New York in 1904 and received the degree of Bachelor of Science, magna cum laude, at Harvard University, in 1924. He spent three years in the Graduate School of Architecture at Harvard and worked for three years in the architectural office of Aymar Embury II, New York. For several years he traveled and studied architecture in Europe and in Mexico. In 1935 he gave a course on domestic architecture at the Hartford Art School and in 1937 he was visiting lecturer at the Graduate School of Fine Arts, New York University, where he lectured on modern architecture.

The Museum's Department of Architecture and Industrial Art, founded in 1933, has in the past five years organized seventeen exhibitions and published ten books, among them Modern Architecture and Machine Art.
